Light, airy and sparkling "Liberty Belles" gave a small audience a con-tinuous round of pleasure and amusement tinuous round of pleasure and amusement at the Auditorium Monday night. There is little of constructive continuity to the piece, but the songs, dances and witty dialogues came in such rapid-fire order that there was "something doing" all the time. The chorus, so necessary to a production of this kind, was composed of pretty girls whose voices were heard with good effect in clear, well-rounded cadences. The soloists were very acceptable, but not especially noteworthy. Toby Craige's impersonations of Anna Held and other stage celebrities, and Will Conley's imitations of wild animals were two clever numbers.

While in Brattleboro yesterday C. W. Witters of St. Albans, counsel for the Central Vermont Railway company, said that while the company had until the end of next year to broad gauge the Brattle-boro & Whitehall railroad the work probably would be completed during the coming summer. Ties already are being put in and orders have been given for fitting up cars to be used as bunks by the laborers. In regard to putting in a branch to the timbered district in Somerset, Stratton and other towns he said a care ful survey would be made soon and that if the grades were such that a road could be extended at reasonable expense it probably would be built, the owners of the timber being asked to furnish the des. Mr. Witters said that the charter for the Brattleboro & Whitehall road does not provide for building a branch road, and intimated that if such a branch were constructed an independent company would be organized for that purpose, con-sisting of Central Vermont men.

A choice stock of expletives was hurled at Policeman Worden by Mrs. Frank Tenney of Putney Saturday night, but they did not hurt him as much as the blows which she landed on his jaw. In consideration of her sex the officer handled making a scene. When the officer's atat the railroad station waiting for the night train, and was swearing with unusu-al vehemence. He put her aboard the train. and immediately she smashed out window with her fist, cutting a gash in her hand. Her conduct was such that the officer removed her and took her to the Brooks House in the hotel barge. During the performance she slipped away from him and fell on the platform at the rallroad station. As he was picking her railroad station. As he was picking her up she knocked off his helmet and punched him in the face. At the hotel she let loose a number of war-whoops and carried on in a sensational way until a physician gave her a drug which put her to sleep. In the morning she was allowed to go on her way and she started out about 5 o'clock.

Readsboro began Saturday a search for Lester J. Stafford, their cousin, who dis-appeared last October from the house of N. Fairbank in Gullford, where he lived. They are searching the Cook lot east of the Fairbank house. This territory was carefully gone over by John E. Gale, administrator of Stafford's estate, and others last autumn, and while it is the place where Stafford most likely would go Mr. Gale has no faith that the body go Mr. Gale has no faith that the body will be found. It was thought at one time that Stafford went to Bernardston, time that Stafford went to Bernardston, as several people there reported seeing a person who answered his description, but Mr. Fairbank has run down all clews in that direction. Much illegal shooting of deer took place in Guilford and Vernon last autumn, and as Stafford acted wildly whenever he saw strangers Mr. Gale thinks he may have been shot while running through the woods and his bedy ning through the woods and his body put out of sight. It is a singular fact that 15 years ago an uncle of Emerson Stafford, on his mother's side, disappeared from West Hawley, Coan, leaving a note saying that it would be useless to hunt for him, and although a search with bloodhounds was begun within half an hour no trace of him ever was found.
